GOVERNOR B. B. COMER.

The railway rate controversy in Alabama has brought into prominence the governor of the commonwealth, B. B. Comer of Birmingham, who as the Democratic candidate for the office last fall carried sixty out of the sixtyseven counties of the state. He is the largest cotton planter and manufacturer of Alabama. The governor took the position that the Southern railway should observe the provisions of the new Alabama two and one-half cent rate law and the law fixing freight rates on 110 commodities, pending determination of the constitutionality of the acts by the United States supreme court, and he succeeded in bringing the road to his terms.
